

Abstract

A system includes a device management computer, a data concentrator computer for communicating with the device management computer, a gateway device for communicating with the data concentrator computer, and a plurality of mobile data acquisition devices. Each of the plurality of mobile data acquisition devices communicates with the gateway device. The gateway device performs pre-processing functions on data collected by the plurality of mobile data acquisition devices prior to transferring the data to the data concentrator computer.